If you own your Cox Homelife equipment and you move within your local Cox service area during your contract term, you may: (i) request that Cox uninstall your system and pay Cox an uninstall fee, (ii) uninstall the system yourself, or (iii) leave the system in the home. If you leave the system and want to purchase a new system for your new home, you may cancel your existing contract and either pay any applicable early termination fees and buy a new system at the discounted package prices available to new customers (with a new two-year contract), or purchase a new system at then-current a la carte rates and Cox will waive the early termination fee. You are responsible for transportation of any system and/or components to the new home when the system is uninstalled. If you elect to move your system to your new home, Cox will reinstall the equipment in the new home if requested and for a reinstallation fee. You may be eligible for a discount on any equipment upgrades. If you have more than one year remaining on your Cox Homelife contract term, you will continue with any remaining contract term commitment. If you are in the second year of your Cox Homelife contract term, you may elect to replace the existing contract with a new two-year contract at prevailing rates and Cox will waive the equipment reinstallation fee.
